CURRENCIES:

All the currencies are weak. The Yen has long been weak, but the breakdown of long-established seven-year trading ranges in the Euro and the Sterling is clear and important. (Tho' obviously need monthly closes to confirm) All time-frames agree: there are clear well-structured medium-term trends in place within which there are good completed shorter-term patterns driving the markets on. The Euro is weaker against the Dollar than Sterling, hence the rally of the latter against the Euro in the cross rate.
